Post-Mortems

A BRIEF news dispatch from Ottawa says that Mr. Douglas Fisher, who has an iconoclastic turn of phrase, has told the House of Commons that the April election showed all parties to have been failures. One hopes not entirely, for they are all we have got.

What precisely he meant is none too clear, although since he cited the Liberals as the biggest failtres because they won only 129 seats after claiming in advance they would capture 160 or 170, it seems apparent he was judging the parties by their new standings in the House.

This of course is the criterion by which all parties measure their political success but of necessity the implication is that the electorate itself proved to be a failure. If this is so then in some respects the electorate is always a failure. Only one party ever actually wins, even as at present in a minority guise.

It is an inevitable corollary of our democratic system, and surely Mr. Fisher would not have it otherthat when more than one party is in the fieldand heaven forbid that there should ever be only one— the votes and the seats will be distributed among all the contestants. It is awkward, unsettling and unsatisfactory when these are so spread around that no clearcut decision gives one party a majority mandate, but the facts of political life must be accepted.

Even his own party, the NDP, which he lists among the failures, cannot be dismissed quite as he dismisses it. It may have proved to be lacking as "a national force," as he says, but only in that it did not gain office or a larger representation. It polled votes in every province, however, as did each party wherever it entered a candidate, and thus all parties have a determining say across the nation.

The real test of the failure or capacity of all four parties in the Commons will come as they show themselves in managing the nation's affairs. Each no matter its strength gained its place in the House because it represents a segment of the population, and it is the general weal of all to which Parliament should direct

The election is over and the result has to be absorbed since there can be no thought of another for some time. It is up to all parties to get on with the business put to their combined charge. Post-mortems on who failed and who didn't are best left to their own private political machines.

Peer and Commoner

TF IT HAS BEEN DIFFICULT to reform the Cana-I dian Senate, and over the years much lip service and nothing else has been paid to the idea, it has been vastly more awkward to change the membership of the British House of Lords, wherein ancient here-ditary privileges hold sway. Tradition seems about to be shattered, however.

The Macmillan government has introduced a bill to permit hereditary peers to renounce their titles, something that a few short decades ago would have been deemed little short of heresy in aristocratic

And this comes about mainly because of the unceasing efforts of a Labor peer to continue his political career in the House of Commons, which is barred to one whose succession to the peerage automatically removes him to the Lords. His constituents backed his preference by re-electing him as a commoner even Commons. The temper of the times has altered. Another factor adding to what seems the basic right of an individual to accept or reject a peerage, is that this change will permit politically active peers to set their sights on the prime ministership. For half-a-century now it has been the unwritten rule that no prime minister can sit in the House of Lords, but must lead his government in the Commons. Invariably there are cabinet ministers in the Lords, just as sometimes there may be a senator in the adian cabinet, but in modern times none of these could ever aspire to be prime minister. The new bill will open this door to them, assuming they care to renounce their peerages.

It is not likely nevertheless that there will be wholesale renunciation of peerages as a result of this reformation; the prestige and privilege of a peerage, especially a hereditary one—the new legislation does Me peers or spiritual or legal lords—still ranks highly in Britain. But those who prefer to sit in the Commons will be free to do so.

Dangers Ahead

ON WEDNESDAY hat week in Vancouver Mr. Adlai Stevenson, the American ambassador to the United Nations and probably the most able prectitioner of the almost forgotten art of interma-tional diplomacy in the United States, predicted an ultimate collision of black and white races in Africa. On Thursday last week in Paris, Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D.—N.Y.) predicted a "black man's revolution" in the United States.

Can it be but curious coincidence that these men—both American citizens, both holding office in the United States, both members of the same political party—chose almost the same moment to prophesy the same future fate for both the continents of North

Or can it be that both Ambassador Stevenson and Representative Powell are relaying the fact that their government now recognizes that the racial problems facing both Africa and the United Status are such that they could endanger the security of the West in particular, and eventually the world in general?

If the latter is the case their world could well have the such as their world as the control of the security of the latter is the case their world could well have the security of the security of the security of the latter is the case their world could well them.

Aging Party

MR. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): I believe that the April 8 election has done something; it has expressed the Canadian people's preference for the two-party system, and I believe that before too long the third and fourth parties will disappear from our political spectrum. The New Democratic Party was something of a marvel in our age. Never was there a party so long aborning, never such elaborate birth rites, and yet it seems to have gone into a decline before it reached its adolescence.

Talking Wines Also Art

White ART BUCKWALD is on vaca-tion we are reprinting second of his favorite columns. The following is

By ART BUCHWALD

PARIS - The problem of esting your friends at wine talk becomes more difficult all the time. It isn't enough to drink wines—you must be able to talk about them, if not intelligently, at least at

Mr. Alexis Lichine, who rrote a book called Wines of France and is up to his neck in the wine business, has given us some provocative phrases that can be used at the dinner table either in your own home or as a guest in the home of a friend

If you're serving wine in your own home, Mr. Lichine Firm Scraps advises you to be very modest When the bottle is put on the table, apologize to your guests "I'll have to beg your pardon," you might say, "but this is a small red wine, inconsequential, with hardly any cheracter."

If no one takes up the balt, go a peg higher. "You know something, I believe the wine is declaring itself. Why, yes, it certainly is. It does have manifestations of greatness at

Chat." Then, if your remarks still o unheeded, let out all stops. The French consider this wine one of their most magnificent sovereigns. They laughingly call it the Napoleon Rosicrucians of Burgundies, and its nobility has gone unquestioned for Meet Monday ages. It's a pity it has to be wasted on such clods."

Drinking wine in somebody else's home is a much easier problem. The host is always looking for compliments and if you're not careful, some or sillier people at the table might start giving them.

The thing to remember is always to be polite. After tasting the wine, a comment like this might be used: "How sad it didn't come from noble soil, because I'm sure that it snight have taken on a prestige couver International Festival's below the greatness that Shaw its own. When speaking of vintages, Bever refer to a wine as 1935 ince said Joan was "a good or 1936. Always drop the 19 and refer to them as '34s, '35s,

Learn the names of a few rare wines and throw them around during dinner as much as you can. If you can assotiate them with a good French restaurant it helps.

For example, never say, "I like Margaux." It's much better to reminisce. "I remem ber a Margaux I once had at the Grand Vefour in '46. What a noble lunch that was!"

Never refer to "wine, women and song" in front of connoisseurs. The other two are so inferior to wine they shouldn't be mentioned in the same

It may be useful when talk ing about wine to know that Bordeaux comes in slim bottles and Burgundy in squat ones. This always impresses people.

When ordering wines in restaurants, study the card for a long time, even if you don't understand what you're rending. Cluck occasionally, and then turn to the sommelier and ask him to advise you on hat to order. Never accept his first suggestion. He is testing you and you don't want Always carry a vintage chart with you. If you're not sure of the best wine years, take the wine chart to the washroom and check it against your vintage chart.

When drinking champagns always make a remark about the bubbles. You can either take the side that you like the es or that you're against them. Our favorite line on this subject is: "I like champagns — because it always tastes like my foots asleep."

normal position either inwards or outwards. When the eyes are not in their pormal position two greatly different images are presented . . . one from each eye. This is very confusing to the brain and the person will see double for a time and then one image will be ignored, and only one eye is used in seeing. The result is a lowering of vision in the unused eye. This condition is particularly serious in childhood because if one eye goes unused for even a short time, then there will be little or no vision in that eye later in life. Squint can very often be overcome with glasses or visual training or both but sometimes an operation is required to straighten the eyes. It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least every two years.

Apartment Living Answer To Ever-Increasing Need

Why are apartment homes popular type of dwelling and rowing in popularity? growing in popularity? The Bank of Montreal in a tendency is towards larger housing review says that in-creased population mobility is a main cause. It also finds that a main cause. It also finds that apartments are best suited in terms of space and cost to young families with no children or only one child, to older couples whose children are no longer living at home, and to non-family households.

This is due to a rising trend in the size of Canadian families and the coincident rise in incomes. The availability of mortgage money has also heiged.

It was a gloriously surprising season. Fans were jamming the arena at the finish and Victoria was about to become the lacrosse capital of the world.

For next season, Norm Baker was back and the Sham rocks also brought in Archie Browning and Whitey Severson This time they went all the way to start a string of four successive league championships. They won again in 1952, 1953 and 1954, finished second in 1955, third in 1956 and regained the league championship in 1957.

It's some thing that should have been done before, like in 1960 on the occasion of the club's 10th birthday, but perhaps now is the right time to pay a bit of a tribute to the first team.

The decline of the Shamrocks started at approximately the same time the early-year Shamrocks ran out of years. Since their last Mann Cup win in 1957, the Shamrocks have never been higher than third and were dead last four times. In their last five seasons, their record is 48-100-4, attendance has dipped as low as 12,269 and an average of about 20,000 and since 1950, their playing record is 29.75-2 and the average yearly attendance about 17,000. In other words, things couldn't much worse and the time is here to start over, and what better way to start than by giving the fellows who started it all in the first place a "night"?

It poses no great problem, no less than 14 of the 16 players who were regulars in 1950 being resident in the city. Darryl Popham is deceased and Norm Coates now calls Hartford, Conn., his home town but resident here are Arnie Ferguson, Ed Popham, Fred Ranson, Art Green, Larry Booth, Lan Scott, Red McMillan, Steve Kynoski, Bill Andrews, Duff McCaghey, Tom Druce, Bob Monoghan, Andy Ovcharik and Vic Sage. Bringing them all together for a "night" at Memorial Arene couldn't help but help, it should bring out many fans who have lost the habit but who will well remember the first Shannocks. Most of all, seeing the originals together again will be a reminder that if it could be done once it can be done again. In 13 years Victoria has failed to produce enough of its own to match its first ICLL team. Perhaps what we need is living proof that it can be done.

The fig tree putieth forth song of Solomon 2:10-13. mig the right mate.

Daniel, of Biblical times, deported into Babylonia as a youth, probably witnessed at first hand the problems involving marriages with alien wives, all leading to divorce.

So he wrote:

"As you seem to be descriptions of nature, showing the contains rapturous words about the loved one and vivid descriptions of nature, showing real understanding of nuptial involving marriages with alien wives, all leading to divorce.

Stubborn Heart

Pontiff Sinking Steadily

VATICAN CITY (CP)-Pope John XXIII sank alowly but stendily toward death Saturday night, despite a stout heart stubbornly resisting the end his doctors said is inevitable.

Indicating the moment is near, the pontiff's doctor ordered all visits to the Pope uspended, the Vatican Press Office announced at 9:20 p.m. Rome time (1:20 p.m. PDT). The Pope's personal doctor, Antonio Gasbarrini, then entered the papal apartment.

FEW VISITORS The pontiff, 81, slipped back and forth between coma and consciousness during the day and a trickle of visitors reached his bedside and received his blessing and assurance that he was prepared for death.

"I have been able to follow the course of my death step by step." he told a prelate in a period of lucidity. "Now I am going sweetly toward the end." CROWDS PRAY

Crowds gathered in St. Peter's Square, below the papal apart-ment, and prayed for the miracle that his doctors said was the only thing that could save him.

Yachts Finding Needed Wind In Dark Strait

Safely away from perhaps the slowest start in Swiftsure history, entries in the West Coast racing classic were finding the wind they wanted last night in Juan de Fuce Strait.

Colonist reporter Don Gain, accompanying the racers aboard the tug Sudbury II, gave these names of leaders before darkness hid the vessels. Well shead were Sea Fever Diamend Head, Ladaro, Spirit

These yachts had crossed to the American side of the strait and by 10:30 p.m. were a little west of Ciallam Bay. Nearing the U.S. side behind the leaders were Serada and Sulaire with Circe not far behind them.

SPREAD OUT About 60 per cent of the racers were spread out in an area from Sherringham Point to Pillar Point.

Reports indicated that while a 12-mile wind out of the west was helping vessels on the American side, some on the Canadian side were still whistling for a breeze—and even considering anchoring for the night near Jordan River.

TURNING POINT Meanwhile HMCS Beacon Hill was on her way to take up position on the site of the Swiftsure Light, traditional turning point in the race.

Leaders were expected to come around her between 4 TWO DROP OUT

By 10 p.m. two of the entries had dropped out of the Onna, Class B sloop recently acquired by Louis Lindholm of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, and Hawk, a Class A sloop owned by R. K. Farris of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, Commenting on the lead group, officials said Ladaro, cause of her rating, was in a favorable position. She is a Class BB vessel, while all the others are in the big AA class.

Kenchie and Ken Banks. Bringing them all together for a "night" at lifemorial Arens couldn't help but help. It should bring out many fans who have lost the habit but who will well remember the first Shamrocks. Most of all, seeing the originals together again will be a reminder that if it could be done once it can be done again. In 13 years Victoria has failed to produce onough of its own to match its first ICLL team. Purhaps what we need is living proof that it can be done.

Pastrano New Champion In Big Boxing Upset

By BOB MYERS

LAS VEGAS. Nev. (AP)
Underrated Willie Pastrano won the light heavyweight championship of the world Saturday night, punching out a split decision over Harold Johnson in the biggest upset of the year in the fight game.

An underdog at odds that ranged up to 6-1 in this gambling mecca, the 27-year-old Pastrano, from North Miami Beach, Fia., brought a crowd of some 5,000 to its feet in a rousing 15th round that clinched the victory. Johnson, Judge John Romero, had it 69-68 for Johnson. But Judge Harry Krause shifted the nod to the New Orleans-born Italian, 69-67.

The asspense was intense as the ring announcer rounded up the scoring slips. Most of the crowd at the Las Vegas Convention Centre thought Pastrano won to the New Orleans-born Italian, 69-67.

The Associated Press scored to the world title in a fight with no was the winner, and a groun arous when it was revealed there had been a split decision.

Rugged River

The Skeena is a tremendous river with a proud name, the second largest wholly in B.C. The river is a roaring bearcat in places, drop-ping 800 feet in 180 miles; boiling through treacherous Kitselas Canyon, running white and sometimes muddy. From its banks at Cedarvale can be seen the most beautiful mountain vista in B.C., the Seven Sisters at

The romantic era of the steamboats came to an end with the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Whigs O'Neil of Smithers, the last man who could have done it, according to Little, has written a book entitled "Steemboat Days on the Skeena." It's in the public library in Victoria.

The north has always been able to supply a job. Today it offers a future with many opportunities. Mining is the coming thing. In the years ahead it will shape the economic growth of the province. Young Canadians should not overlook the opportunities the north offers. These are Dudley Little's opinions.

'Beavers' First in Canada

In 1849 the British government passed an act enabling the Canadian legislature to establish inland posts.

As a result the post office department came into being April 6, 1851.

Postmaster General James Morris gave a verbal order in New York to Rawdon, Wright, Hatch and Edwon to engrave and print stamps for Canada, the values being 3d, 6d and 12d tone shilling).

Sandford Fleming, an engineer and surveyor then living in To-ronto, was instructed by the Postmaster General to prepare designs for the first set of Canadian stamps.

This he did for the 3d and 12d, both designs having for the central

With some modifications the 3d design was accepted and com-pleted. It was issued April 23, 1851. The 6d and 12d were changed and redesigned by others.

Mr. Fleming's office was located over the Toronto store of John Bentley, druggist and stationer. There the first designs for Can-

In 1863 the people of the Red River Settlement, now part of Manitoba, asked him to urge the British authorities to provide rail-way communication with Eastern Canada.

Out of this idea grew the Inter-colonial Railway connecting Halifax and Montreal, of which Fleming was chief engineer during construction.

He headed an expedition through the Rocky Mountains by the Yellowhead Pass. Fleming was a strong advocate of this route through the Rockies and his recommendation was carried out by both the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern railways on their trans-continental lines.

HAWAIIAN DINNER? SPOTS on a RUG?

Who ever heard of a cook book being a best seller? We think of cook books as being pretty prosaic and only interesting to certain people, at best a restricted market.

However, "Joe's Notebook"-recipes and household hints-has proved an exception . . . up to the present nearly 35,000 copies have been sold.

Victor Seary, manager of Ryemon Press, says that "any Canadian book that sells over 3,000 copies is a best seller."

We therefore must conclude that the sale of this little book is phenomenal. Furthermore, what is more astonishing is that it is happening right here in Victorin ... "Joe's Notebook" has been published by Radio Station CJVI and printed by the Colonist Printers Ltd. Of course there is a story behind lit.

Joe Easingwood, an affable bachelor and the durling of Victoria Housewives, is the control figure. And it all started five years ago with a little five-minute radio feature. It was a device whereby strangers could use the broadcasting station to ediverse with each other about mutual househald problems. Jue invited his audience to phone in their household problems so that other listeners could offer friendly advice and solutions. It was a bit like the old prairie party line where everyone listened in whonever the phone rang. . . . everyone's business was everyone's business.

From this very small beginning the program has snowballed into an hour and a half show, five days a week. Even with the 90 rainutes a day devoted to this program, called "Joe's Notebook," the number of persons attempting to get through to Joe far exceeds the capacity of the three lines used exclusively to carry the program.

"Joe's Notebook is lively sparkling, and an informative program of facks and fun. Factual information on how to get rid of pests, stains and dandruff; how to give a Hawaiian Luau or make Mexican eachiladas; how to make saki, stiffen-crinoline or remove the shee polish used by Junior to "wax" the kktchen floor; how to make candles, unshrink a wood sweater or how to discourage the dog's animosity for the postman.

The fun is supplied by the inevitable screwball who livera up the program with silly questions. Discussions sometimes become quite animated over nothing more important than the best bay to make Torkshire pudding. But Joe never lets the situation get out of hand..., he is a true diploinet. His patience with long-winded and exasperating women (there are a few you know though Joe would (there are a few you know, though Joe would be the last to admit it) has long been a subject of comment. His sympathetic voice and general affability has endeared him to thousands of housewives. No movie idol has more enthusiastic fans than Joe.

Joe Ensingwood's popularity has been confirmed by the run-away sales of the recently-published "Biotebook." Now in its fourth printing since just before Christmas, orders are ing since just before Christmas, orders are still rolling in.

Over the years many interesting problems and solutions have been discussed on the program and since food is a major household subject, many sucipes have been exchanged. Joe kept notes of all the recipes and hints and after literally hundreds of requests, CJVI decided to incorporate them into a book. With fingers crussed, 10,000 copies were ordered, These were snapped up as fast as they came.

The story would not be complete without mentioning the unique method of distribution.

The "Notebook" is not being sold through the usual outlets, but by thousands of members of charitable organizations. Organizations of this kind have been able to purchase the "Notebook" at cost. CJVI has absorbed the 5c mles tax on the selling price of $1. Thus the charities make 100 per cent markup, or 50c per copy. Pennies from Heaven!

Through these sales church boards have received assistance toward paying off mortgages, choir stalls, carpets, stained glass windows and furniture have been bought. A morticipal of the sales and furniture have been bought. dows and furniture have been bought. A men's auxiliary went into the cookbook selling business to send underprivileged boys to summer camp. A Scout pack raised a considerable sum towards sending a Victoria boy to the World Scout Jamboree in Greece this summer.

THE ISLAND HAD A MAGIC FOR THE WORMALDS

There are few words in the English language more imbued with magic than "island." Say it to almost anyone, and he at once floats away upon his own particular dream . . . the South Seas, with palms waving above a white beach; a wooded, rock-girt chunk of land with a cosy log cabin; a sea teeming with fish, or perhaps just sending in great turquoise rollers; privacy and leisure; a refuge. Here in B.C. our islands have their own special magic—and two people who know this well are Sidney and Edna

They have retired now to a little cottage at 30 Pilot Streetand the breakers that pound the Dallas beaches are only a stone's throw away. But long years ago Sid Wormald cleared and settled in the virgin bush of the Queen Charlottes, and later, after his marriage, Galiano was his home for some 26

They are both English-born. Sidney came from Cheshire in 1910, a youngster all alone, looking for adventure. He had a trade—he's a first-class carpenter-and he settled hriefly in Toronto; But he didn't like the winters, and when somebody told him that B.C. was riftler and that a town called Prince Rupert was going ahead pretty fast, he promptly trekked west and found himself a job on Digby Island.

He also worked on the Jordan River dam later on, and tried the paper mills at Ocean Falls. At the latter spot he decided that what said about that rainy town was dangerously close to truth . . . stay there long enough and you grow scales. The idea didn't appeal to him, so he looked about for other fields.

And here is where the islands first began to work their enchant-ment with the young Englishman. The Queen Charlottes, he was told, beautiful, handy, and avail-to homesteaders. He heard about the ducks and the wild geese And he was on his way. It took him four days by boat from Vancouver, and he got himself a quarter section of timberland about a mile inland from a tiny settlement called Graham Centre, on Masset Inter. To reach his homestead he had to take a boat from Port Clements, also on the inlet, where there was a 12x14-foot store open once a week and pack the rest of the way on foot. There were, he says, about 200 other settlers island at that time.

He was there for three years. He huilt himself a log cabin, and he also built Graham Centre a church, by request, It was about 16x20 and was heated by a little stove set on a marmalade box filled with gravel. Heber Green, now retired, will do likewise, a certain Sunday morning service during which, as the Collect was being intoned for a de vout congregation of eight, there came a sudden sharp rattle as of hail, and great white pebbles bounced and claitered all over the bare, flour boards. Years later Mr. Wormald went back to the place, and found that the wilderness had completely taken over. The growth of trees had crushed the little church flat. and all that was left of the store was a collapsed corner of lo through which fern and brack grew. The trails were covered with Indian bones fallen from their rotted burial places in the trees above.

He himself had come to the conclusion, at the end of his three years there, that his own plans were not likely to mature. He had cleared his land for pasture, but it seemed there would be no man kets. He sold out, though he still owns 70 acres of fine timberland on nearby Kumdis Island.

In Victoria he presently met and married Miss Edna Taylor, out from the Old Country with her mother. The couple went to Oakland, California, and it was there that their two children, Ray, an officer in the RCN who is well known to Colonist renders and Linda were born.

The depression came along and in 1932, a very bad year in the States, the family returned to Victoria, at which time an odd series of events sent them to Galiano.

Mythical Sheep

Sidney's father had died, and his mother had come to Victoria, Alone, with money of her own, it seemed that she had been victimized by unscrupulous people who had soli her a sheep ranch on Gali-ano which she had never seen. No one else had, either. Sidney, who had a friend living there, went over to visit him and to hunt up the sheep. They were a myth. But Sidney promptly fell in love with Galiano. He bought three acres on the east coast, just north of Active

Here again was virgin land. And no roads or trails. So, in a borrowed rowboat, our island pioneer took off from the nearest govern-ment wharf with his wife, his two youngsters. Ray, now 9. Linda, 7, and the dog, the cat, and the parrot. They had some second-hand canvas, four ship's mattresses, bed ding, a sheet metal stove and enough groceries to start them off They landed on their own beach and found a flat place on which one sadly realizes, is pretty well gone for good. They established a comfortable camp. Weoden boxes floated in to their beach and were nailed in to their beach and were nailed to the trees for shelves. There was driftwood of all kinds, some of it suitable for tables and benches. Fish were plentiful, and were traded for shee-repairs, eggs, and other necessities. A fresh-water spring bubbled beside them.

Gift of the Gods

This last had its own little story. The water filled a small rocky de pression in the shape of a human foot, and the Indians called it "Gift of the Gods." One day, it seems, of the Gods." One day, it seems, an Indian had crawled half-drowned from the sea and, dying of thirst, staggered up the rocks.. A god appeared to him and inquired.
"Well, what seems to be the matter with you?" Or words to that effect. "Water!" gasped the man.
"Oh, very well," replied the god
obligingly, "Right behind you!"
And there, where he had stepped,

Matters progressed on the Wormald encampment. There was car-penter work available to Sid from time to time. He bought a rowbook and the children caught fish every and the children caught fish every day. They had a kitchen tent and a vegetable garden, and now he started to build a house for the winter. By the time cold weather was upon them he had a three-respond house far namer on the out. roomed house, tar paper on the outside, all ready.

He dug them a well, and with the aid of a hand pump operated every other day or so, they could send their water by an overhead flume to barrels mounted high on a shelf outside the house, which gave them gravity flow for inside use. Ray, the lisherman, put out a set-line very night, and he got his father to cut him a small peep-hole with a sliding door in the wall be-side his bed, so that first thing in the morning, cosily and without climbing out of the blankets, he could see whether or not he had

During the next two or three ears Sid Wormald built three more cottages, which he rented in the summers. He also put in some 80 fruit trees, and presently built his family a good year-round house.

Friendly Pets

The animals enjoyed the simple life, too. Pepper, the black spaniel; Jimmy, the cat; and Paul, the parrot, were a friendly trio and ate out of the same dish. Over the course of the 26-year stay on Gali-ano there were many visits else-Continued on Page 14

MEN of the MATILPI QUICK with a KNIFE

Compared to the well-settled and comfortable air of the U.S. and Canadian Gulf Islands, a sense of power and grandeur is evident as soon as you enter the maze of islands and interconnecting waterways northwest of Seymour Narrows.

Here the often mile-deep waters are swifter and colder-und clearer -the ravens supercede the crows and eagles become as common as seagulls. I once counted 70 in a single afternoon perched at times in rows on whitening shoreline snags as we sped through the Euclataws and Cordero Channel. Sped is right, for in the rapids I'll swear we made 16 knots!

My travels there were always in a 60foot diesel-powered police patrol boat and whether it was my over-active imagination or an obsession with B.C.'s early day lore, wherever she stuck her prow I invariably tried to reconcile the scene with past events. It was always a satisfying

Once, tied up overnight at a deserted cannery at Radonda Bay, the fact that rats came abourd to explore our upper deck didn't interest me so much as the knowledge that in this very bay Capt. George Vancouver had laid alongside the high-pooped ships of Galiano and Valdez, probably exchanging toasts in vistage sherry and port. It's while this was going on that Quartermaster Johnstone (probably bored with the inactivity) climbed as island mountain to discover the existence of Seymour Narrows, and of course the existence of Seymour Narrows, and of course Johnstone Strait.

Johnstone Strait.

On our up-coast patrols as far as Aleri Bay we usually went by way of the Euclataws, crossing the mouth of Fredericks Arm into Cordero Channel (more rapids), then swinging down through Chancellor Channel to Johnstone Strait, usually tieing up for the night at the float opposite Hanson's store at Port Neville. It was easier to tie up there, rather than drop the hook in nearby Blenkinsop Bay which usually dried away out, especially at spring tides. We had been in there of course and on these stray occasions. I was not unconscious of the fact that in this haven, over 60 years before me, another Provincial Policeman probed and poked around the mouth of Tuna River at the head of the bay, to finally come up with the key to a mystery; a mystery involving no less than seven murders, four suicides, not to speak of a hanging.

APART FROM THE FACT that the 128th mer-idian runs spang through the site of the un-watched beacon light on the starboard headland, this bay was also once the sauthern boundary of the early-day kingdom of the Kwakisti (pre-Page 6-The Daily Colonist, Bunday, June 2, 1960

In the late '300 this very bay was the private domain of a character called Narkamalis. As slick in his Paychological thinking as any medicine man.

I'd like to make it clear at the outset that there's no wish or my part to denigrate the Indian. Lord knows he's had a tough enough time at the hands of the white man in the last 150 years; and if his antics around Jehnstone Strait can be typed "bloodthirsty" keep in mind that when Capt. George Vancouver sailed past Blenkinsop Bay on July 16, 1792, civilized Frenchmen were grabbing some of their fellow citizens on the streets of Paris and dropping a laste blade on their necks! They even had a basket handy to catch the heads!

When you get right down to it, the early-day

When you get right down to it, the early-day count Indian lived in somewhat the same style an earlier-day Scottish clansman; on a diet deer and salmon, with a little robbery and mayhem thrown in to keep the blood moving. The same family feuds existed, the same veneration for the badges of family or clan—totem or it comes out the same way. The Indian, late in the race, never caught up

Their Chosts Familiar

THESE KWAKIUTL on Johnstone Strait, like other B.C. tribes, had a folklore equalling Grimm or Hans Christian Andersen for Imagery and description. They believed in spirits, and animals were people with the power of speech. They saw ghosts "who evolved" like "smoke" through which men could pass their outstretched arms and encounter nothing. Once, in one of their tales, a woman's skull on a shelf spoke these

Thus the speech of the "savages" who of course never heard of Shakespeare, but who would have nodded a writer's agreement and remembered his own line: "Get you to my lady's chamber . . , to this favor she must come."

The policeman who investigated Blenkinsop Bay in 1887 needs perhaps a mention; he was John "Dashing Jack" Flewin, born in Victoria's fort and a toddler of two when his parents helped on the company's Uplands farm, where now the army camp is giving way to new Victoria University buildings on Finnerty Road. At 16 Jack Flewin started as a compositor on The Colonist, At 16 I. too, applied for a ich on The Colonist. At 16 I, too, applied for a job on The Colonist but there was no slot then for me so I joined the Provincial Police. Flewin merely reversed the procedure.

FT WAS IN 1873 that young Flewin started setting type by hand on nights when "Red" Norton, a bull of a man, renowned for strength, cranked the rotary Hoe press by hand to turn off 3.000 papers.

"Managing to read my writing alright?" said editor Dave Higgins one night as he looked over Flewin's shoulder.

"Oh, I make out a word here and there," said Jack nonchalantly, "and fill in the gaps my-

It was while he was working in the composing room that one day he set up in type an account of an up-coast Indian killing, little knowing that 14 years later he would be in at

This 1874 story had to do with the discovery of the bodies of three Indians on the beach at Nor West Bay. One man turned out to be a Namimo Indian called Looking Glass, the others his son and daughter-in-law. Police investigation showed the two men had died from multiple stab wounds and the woman had died either from a broken neck or drowning. Anyway she was minus her clothes. ing. Anyway she was minus her clothes.

At first it was thought to be a knife fight between father and son but when Mrs. Looking Glass turned up she told how the family had been fishing off Qualicum and returning home had fallen in with two cance loads of savage Matilpis from Johnstone Strait. In a fight that ensued the two Nanaimo men were stabled to death, and when the cance over-turned the daughter-in-law drowned. It was one of the Matilpi women, said Mrs. L. G., who stripped the dead girl of her clothing.

IN A MONTH OR SO Provincial Constable Bill Stewart of Nanaimo, by dint of roaming the northern waterways by canoe, rounded up three culprits, Na Na Look Me, Macmoose Sociamee, and La La Koot Sa. Phonetically of course these are wild approximations of the real names given in a mixture of mumbled gutturals that defy reproduction in print. They probably meant terms like "Knows where sal-mon are" or "He who died twice," meaning on some occasion he fainted a couple of times. some occasion he fainted a couple of times. One Kwakiuti woman's name I once saw trans-

In the light of events that followed the Lucking Glass affray I'm pretty confident that Narkamalis "our man at Blenkinsop Bay" was in one of the Matilpi cances but managed to slip out of the subsequent picture when the law intervened. As it developed that chap had a most unusual ploy; to obviate any cross-argument in subsequent courtroom probes he somehow counselled suicide to any of his accomplices who might be in custody.

"You're hooked and you're going to he hanged by the white man," was perhaps his brief advice. To avoid complications they took the hint. Na Na Look Me hanged himself in the Namaimo juil before his trial, and Macmoose Sockamee held apart from him in Victoria's Bastion Square prison, did the same thing. he went back up to Johnstone Strait. On the sidelines Narkamalis probably figured he had opened an interesting loophole in the whiteman's mumbo jumbo legal code. It's on this note we'll drop the Looking Glass case; but only for the time-being.

It was nine years before the Provincial Pulice again had occasion to eye seriously the doings of the Matilpi and this time it was on the occasion of a big jamboree at Salmon River, across the channet from Blenkinsop Bay. When the festivities got a little out of hand one Talaguna knifed and killed Quom Kack Elack Is. Swiftly the police were on the Kack Elack Is. He had cause to be put out, for not only was he the older brother of the man who was hanged, but the murdered man was his father-in-law. Additional cause for remorae was that at the trial he inadvertently blurted out enough testimony to help put the rope around his brother's neck. An action which, if it satisfied his wife, turned his nince, Sally At Leo Muit, against him. In Sally's mind her uncle Quessilet had helped hang her father.

Simple Solution

AS BEE BROODED BY the flickering light of a boach fire over this impossible domestic situation, suddenly in his mind dawned a solution. He could even up the whole thing, and at the same time put his organismee to rest. He'd kill the hangman!

In the early spring of '86, a couple of months after Talaguma's execution, that olitime victoria candy maker, George Lilley, then a Crofton farmer, decided to drop in one morning on his nearby bachelor homesteader neighbor Jim Miller. Another bachelor, Bill Dring, was often at Miller's, eating or playing cards, although the chief bond was their addiction to the bottle.

Lifley gaily swung open the door to see Miller slumped back in his chair at the table and Dring on the floor. He naturally thought the pair had been having a big night, but after he nudged the recumbent Dring with his boot he noticed they weren't drunk. They were dead! Not only had both been shot, but in addition their throats were cut!

The police investigation (Mainguy from Chemainus and Langley from Victoria) revealed marks of a canoe having landed on the nearby beach (just south of today's Crofton wharf) and by the pattern of bare feet in the mud, they oncluded Indians were at the bot-tim of the outrage. However, in the we to the followed no matter how assiduously they followed up every clue, finally they had to admit they were stuck.

Whisky for the Braves

THREE MONTHS AFTER the murder of Miller and Dring came another unrelated chapter in the chain of events. This time it concerned the schooner Seabird which left Port Townsend, Washington, for Wragnell, Alaska, skippered by a man called Wells, with Henry Moore as pilot, and a German, Henry Boldt, as cook and hand.

Apparently they'd made a number of such trips, and from later evidence there's no doubt they were possifling whisitery to Indians for furs. From Port Townsend the Sosbird called in at Burrard Inlet for a day or so then shook out her sails and headed on the ebb tide for the Gulf of Georgia. Which was the last anyone saw of her for 14 months.

The ultimate finding of her partially-hurned remains in lil-omened Blenkinsop Bay started a train of police enquiry that not only solved the mystery of her crew's disappearance, but also brought to light the man responsible far the murder of Miller and Dring. It also, by the way, brought back into the picture the grafty Narkamalls, the Matilpi's man of mystery.

Faith Angus' Stamp Packet

An Islander reader across the horder has asked for tips on starthorder has asked for tips on starting collections for younger children. Her six-year-old Bob was given a packet of stamps and a printed album and after a busy half hour, proudly exhibited his work. The simps had been carefully placed (pasted down) with due regard to size and shape but complete disregarm of country or complete disregarn of country or value. In fact, the pages are a fine example of united nations, Now they want to make a frush

The stamps can be removed by laying damp Kleenex over them for a time. Then put the album away for future use. A six-year-old's reading ability is limited, so buy a plain good album with only faint quadrille lines to show how to space the stamps evenly and start with a general collection. This is good training in general knowledge, geography and history. Later on, the child might decide to concentrate on one particular country or topical subject. Bird and animal stamps are usually the most popular.

Teach the basic rules that apply to collectors of all ages, such as clean hands, the use of tongs instead of fingers, the proper use of hinges, and provide clean envelopes or slotted cards for loose stamps. Very few stamps emerge unacathed from a grubby pocket.

And don't forget that they are only stack down on envelopes far mailing, never in a collection!

Sir Walter Scott one day in spring was walking around Abbotsford with Lady Scott. Passing a field where there were a number of ewes and lambs frolicking, "Ah," said he, "'tis no wonder that poets from earliest ages have made the lamb the symbol of peace and innocence." "Delightful animals indeed," rejoined Lady Scott, "especially with mint sauce,"

She might have added "with lemon and with savory green beans."

Roast lamb is very good but roast lamb flavored with the sest of lemon is better, Lemon also brings out the best in our green bean dish. What a dull world this would be without the sparkling tang of lemon. Truly it makes good food better.

Canadian lamb is available throughout the year but right now it is at its very best. Here is a meat that is tender, juicy and of a distinctive flavor. A real treat. The meat of lamb is firm, fine grained, smooth and velvety, and the fat is firm and smooth. The "feil" is a thin, paper-like covering of lamb which it is not necessary to remove before cooking.

One of the favorite cuts is the lag of lamb. One should allow % to pound per serving for bone-in roasts; and do allow for second servings and for cold cuts. There is nothing—but nothing—better than a sile of sold lamb, with mint sauce, of course, unless it's a slice of lat roast lamb. The only rime against lamb is to serve it when neither very hot nor cold. The fat of lamb congests very fast, so be sure the serving plates, as well as the meat, are hot.

Those are the basic facis about lamb so let's get on with preparing and roasting that fine less.

If you own a rotisserie you are lucky... this is an ideal way to roust a leg of lamb. However, the oven does a fine job, Lay the lamb on a rack in an open pan, use a slow oven . . . 325°, for 30 to 35 minutes per pound. Serve with the following sauces:

Besides Their Tools and Training

More than once a man has come up to me and said, "You know, my wife could be a writer. You should see the letters she wrote to me before we were mar-

The implication, it seems to me, is that writing is not quite the manly thing. After all, his wife could write - and presumably other wives as well - if she would set about it.

The speaker himself probably has little doubt that he could write, too, given the time and opportunity to master the "mechanics" - whatever these last may be. The truth usually is that he has no interest in writing itself. He may want to be a writer: that is to say, to have written; to have the recognition, if such there be, without the toil that is its own reward.

Another approach is, "You should write the story of my life. That would make a book for you."

The idea behind this is that the writer is in need of material, whereas the writer's problem is to use the experience that he finds every day around him with the concomitant regret for one writer at least that he has done so little with it. I refer now to the writing of fiction. Articles are another matter. Then the task is to dig out the facts and put them down in order. In writing a short story, for instance, the truth is there at hand. The task is to grasp it and give it shape and endurance in words. This truth comes un-

A while ago the CBC broadcast one of my published short stories. The announcer said that I had come upon the story while I was "travelling the Rockies in search of material." If so, I knew nothing of it at the time. "Experience" would have been the word. I was in search of experience—in this world who is not?—but as a man on skiis and not as a writer.

On a cold night in January, 1934, with Fred Brewster of Jasper, I had approached the cabin of Montana Pete in the foothills east and north of the town. Hearing the crunch of our skils outside his door, he called to us to come in.

outside his door, he called to us to come in.

He was a man with a big chest and a sonorous voice. Over 80 years of age he still patrolled a 20-mile trap-line. His cabin, dimly lit with a coal-oil lamp on its table, had a double bunk. He sat in the upper one, against the log wall. For three months he had had no company and after we had made supper off a haunch of venisor which we pulled from under a pile of his sad die-blankets, he began to talk and continued to talk until after four the next morning.

WRITERS NEED EXPERIENCE!

says HOWARD O'HAGAN

He told us the story of his white horse which had been with him since construction days, al-most thirty years before. The horse had never been broken to ride and in later years, because he was so old, Pete no longer put a pack upon him. During summer days the white borse would poke his head into the cabin through the open window and snatch a hunk of bannock off the table or clumsily upset the tin of sugar. During the winter months, Pete fed him oats and with heav which he had gleared in the fall. and wild hay which he had gleaned in the fall. The horse stayed in a lean-to built against the cabin wall.

Two or three winters before our arrival at the cabin, the horse strayed away and was lost. After days of snowshoeing, Pete found him high up on a side-hill in a mess of downtimber. The white horse, sitting on his haunches, was frozen solid. For nights, after returning to the cabin, he heard the wolves howling as they came to feed off the carcase. His sorrow for the loss of the white horse touched me. As I saw it later, the horse had been a symbol of his younger days when he rode into the mountains, pushing his pack-train with supplies for the surveyors who were blazing the trail that the Grand Trunk Pacific would follow.

Another story was about the tepee when, in another valley, he had been cruising for timber which would make poles and railroad ties. An Indian and his wife put up their tepee half a mile down-river from his tent. They would be descendants of the Iroquois who came west with the early fur-traders and who stayed to many with the native Cree Indians.

marry with the native Cree Indians.

One morning Montana Pete saw the husband pull out down-valley with his horses and decided that evening to visit the wife who had been left behind. When in the twilight he untied the flap of the tepee, he found that his way in was barred by firewood which the woman had stacked against the entrance as if aware of his impending visit. Carefully, one by one, setting them outside the tepee, he removed the pieces of firewood.

When, a few days later, the husband removed the pieces of firewood.

When, a few days later, the husband returned, he rode up to Pete's tent, dismounted, entered, sat down upon a wooden pannier, rolled himself a cigarette and after a long silence, spoke. His wife had told him of Pete's twilight visit. That was quite all right while he himself was away. He did not, however expect Pete to come down there while he ever, expect Pete to come down there while he was at home. I imagine that it was with relief that Montana Pete saw his guest depart.

I was by now, after four in the morning, nodding in my blankets on the floor. At breakfast Pete barely spoke a word. It was evident that the sooner we were on our way, the more he would be pleased,

The point is that after this all-night session. The had not thought that I had come upon "material," much less that I would write about it. It was more than ten years later that the story of the white horse appeared in Maclean's and that of the tepes in the New Mexico Quarterly Review. It was the latter which the CBC broadcast. I did not go out in search of stories, In a subsequent year they came to me entire. In a subsequent year they came to me entire, needing only to be put down on paper.

All the delegates we met were friendly, intelligent, eager to help with news of this route to the were friendly, intelligent, eager to help with news of this route to the Canal Zone which we still hoped to travel with our car and trailer. With their first-hand, up-to-date knowledge we established, for the first time smid the endlessly con-flicting secrets that have besset us. flicting reports that have beset us, that in the dry season the highway is at least passable all the way

Sixty delegates had made this trip, in three buses supplied by a Mexican transport firm. The road may have held no perils, but other odds had confronted them: Bars in each coach; official receptions and dispers such night of the 15. and dinners each night of the 16-day journey from Panama, usually commencing at 11 p.m. and ending

Do They Still Stand Hidden in James Bay?

BY MARGARET SHARCOTT

About two years ago, when we bought an old house on Boyd Street in Victoria's historic James Bay, I discovered by reading the deed that we were situated on a portion of the Beckley Farms property.

Beckley Farms were part of the original Hudson's Bay Company holdings on southern Vancouver Island and the oldest farm in B.C. They not only supplied the Fort with fresh vegetables and dairy products, but, along with the other farms that were established soon after, they produced ex-ports for the company's ships to take to the Russian settlements on the

Later, in re-modeling our house, we extracted old-fash-joned square nails, and found, stuffed in a hole in a partition, a child's notebook, dated 1904-05. I hausted the Provincial Archives and pestered the land registry office until I had uncovered all that I could find of the Beckley Farms and the later days when Boyd Street was born.

It was 1843, the year Fort Victoria was established, that the first 10 acres were broken for cultivation. Three years later over a 100 acres were under cultivation. At first the place was known an Doughas' Farm. On July 7, 1851. Admiral Fairfan Moranby, writing 10 the Secretary of the Alimiralty. said, "Mr Doughas (Governor James) has a committeed in searly completed mear the Fort, and a larmhouse on the inland limit."

By 1854 the farm, had become known as Beckley's as metimes Beckley or Beckney, and occasionally Dutnall's. An 1861 map of Victoria showed An 1861 map of Victoria showes the original dwellings located approximately at the corner of what are now Simone and Menzion Streets. Two more buildings, described as "Lehaped structures" were situated on a hill south of the first two toward Holland Point. According to later maps these two houses were probably near the pinnent corner of Niagara and Menzies Streets.

By 1861 the colonial government had decided that the Hudson's Bay had decided that the Hudson's Bay Company had no right to hold such a large and valuable piece of property. At least, the Crown seems to have regarded the property as valuable although the ne

erty as valuable although the news-papers of the day made scant men-tion of the decision.

Not long after. The Hudson's Bay Company and the government came to an agreement that sound-ed well in London, but which act was a very shrewd deal in or of the Company. The Com-y was ordered to surrender 200 peny acres of its farm, but it was alacres of its farm, but it was allowed to sell and keep the money from the sale of any of the property it could dispose of before January 1, 1862. In addition, the Company was granted title without purchase to the site of the buildings, the garden, and the adjoining land to the south to the extent of Governor James Douglas pointed out in a letter to the Duke of New-castle that while the Crown ap-peared to gain 200 acres, they had peared to gain 200 acres, they had in reality gained nothing, and had, to boot, given the Company 50 acres. For one thing, the Company's right to any of the property was disputable, and secondly, an 1861 ansessment showed they held enty about 50 acres in all, He said "... consequently, instead of a large extent of land being recovered to the Crown under that agreement, as the impression enagreement, as the impression en-tertained by your Grace, I fear it will be found that the Crown does not benefit by one single acre."

Too Late

Douglas's arguments came too late, for the Hudson's Bay Company had said most of the land at $150 a lot. More than 60 acres of the disputed property reverted to the Crown, but some believed that the Crown had sweed it all along. Hand-written entries in the thick books of the Land Registry Office show that the Crown deeded much of its Beckley Farms property in trust on June 7, 1872, to Mesor's. Rithet, Turner, McMillian, McGir-nan and Penrse. This property was probably located near the present Rithet and South Turner Streets. Since there were more entries naming Crown held Beckley Farms property around the same time, it is reasonable to assume that the Crown disposed of the 60 acres in that year.

Just when the Hudson's Bay's Backley Farm was subdivided and Bockley Farm was subdivided and sold is buried in the old records. soid is buried in the old records, but quite possibly it was around 1890-1881. We do know that Boyd Street, which bounded some of the last of the Company-held land, was put through in 1890. The land beside the street was clothed in forcet, known as Medina Grove. The new street was christened Medina, after the grove, but an 1884 map shows the street as Boyd, probably in honor of John Boyd, who was a member of the city council and once ran for mayor but was defeated.

Boyd Street is dated 1889. At that there were two houses, one he corner of Boyd and Niagara and the other halfway along Boyd near where Berwick branches off today. Perhaps the thick brush and the swamp sketched on the 1884 map discouraged real estate.

Still Standing

Today, what became of the original houses of the Beckley Farms is a guessing game. The four dwellings were probably sold on the subdivided land, and may yet stand, but, although I have heard rumors of the present locations. I can find nothing in the Archives to substantiate the claims. Indeed, I'd be glad to hear from anyone who thinks they can identify the eriginal buildings.

Nor do we know who was the ild who scribbled notations, mostly fantasy, in a small memo randum account book dated 1904-05 that we found in a partition. One entry says: "We buried 1000 dollars under the oak tree the swing is on." Another page sim-mers with childhan anger, and tells of meeting a sister Ann down by of meeting a sister Ann down by the lonely bridge with dire and improbable results. The author seems to have been a boy.

Could the child who played at buried treasure under the oak trees, and who was annoyed by his sister Ann, have been a grandchild of H. M. Cowper whom the direc-tories listed as retired when he lived in the house in 1905? Or did the child live in the house in 1904 before it was moved to Boyd Street?

Street?

And there are other mementoes of the past. There is the rusty horseshoe dug up near the back fence. I wonder if it once shod a Beckley Farms horse, or was it discarded by William Biggs, the blacksmith who lived in our house in 1908? What of the old film spools, patented in 1908, that we found in the partition with the child's notebook? Perhaps Mr. Biggs dabbled in photography when his day at the blacksmith's fire was over. And who lit the lovely old brass oil lamp we found under the porch?

I cannot tell, for the old house guards its secrets well, and Beck-

Is Music Festival 'Averaging' Fair?

By BERT BINNY

Back in 1955 the winner of the boys' solo vocal class in the Music Festival, 11 years and under was Roy Silver. Adjudicator Glyndwr Jones gave him 82 points, one more than David Palmer.

The following year Roy was back again in the same class. Again he won it, this time with 83 points. His close rival of the previous year, now, incidentally an organist of some repute, had graduated by natural processes to the 11-and-over class.

By 1957 Roy was also an 11 and over. In that division he finished second, equal with Erick Michael Harrison at 88 points. The winner was George Ross who, as it turned out, competed against Roy this year but less successfully.

In centennial year Roy was second again, this time to Martin Chambers, 85 to 86, but, in 1959 and 1960, he was, as it were, conspicuous by his absence.

"I was away," says Roy, "for two years."

In 1961 he was a competitor in the class for boy's changing voice' and he came out third with 83. It was almost as if, while a change may be as good as a rest, a rest and a change together were no good at all.

Last year he again came second to Martin Chambers, this time in the low voice division, and again by a single point. He was also in a folk song class—one of 17 entrants.

This year Roy was a consistent winner with a consistent mark. He won the sacred solo, low voice, with 86, as well as the low voice class and his folk song class—in each case with 86 points.

Roy is a grade 12 student at Victoria High School, and will be 18 in September.

And, as his persistence in the Music Festival indicates, his ambition is a career in musc.

This year he joined the well-known Meistersingers Male Chorus but, before this, he was with the B.C. All Star choir which performed at the Ousen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver.

He took part in the show, 'Music Through the Ages," staged recently by the Musical Art Society and he has been a member of the Rotary Boys' Choir for eight years.

And, of course, he has participated in numerous concerts and entertainments staged by Victoria High School, including the quite recent "Song of Summer."

Finally, he was with the "Smile Show" in Seattle just a few weeks ago.

He has been trained by Kay Paulin, Rodney Webster and Vera Barclay.

While Music Festival classes seldom comprehend Broadway music or light standards,' Roy has a great liking for the productions of such as Rodgers and Hammerstein, Classically he prefers Tchaikowsky and Schubert.

With the 1963 Music Festival over and gone

but a doubt remains

and with the general meeting of the Festival Seciety not far off, two or three points have emerged — Roy, incidentally connected with them — which could engage the thoughts of those who frame and interpret the rules and regulations.

These questions do not arise as crisicisms of the efficient and painstaking work effected by the festival committee. But problems do arise unexpectedly and forthwith cry for official charification. They could not have been foreseen any more than the makers of Indian trails could have foreseen the need for arterial highways.

For example, a folk song should be defined. Does the term include spirituals or are spiritual hymns? What about sea shanties? Or onlypsos?"

Whatever the definition, it should be clearly stated.

Why should the singers of "lieder" not be considered as soloists even though their accompanies are simultaneously adjudicated and marked? All other singers are operatic, oratorio and what have you. This may well be a traditional custom but, as it stands, it could have a profound effect on a singer's opportunities when taken in relation to other clauses.

It is the easiest thing in the world to separate the performers for one purpose and to unite them for another.

Another of these seemingly known points arose at least twice this year. It occurs in the matter of awards given for the best average mark secured over a number of classes.

In the two instances this year competitors—and Roy was one of them—who had entered and toiled in three classes were need out from certain awards by others who had only tried two. In one case the margin was two-thirds of a point and, in the other, it was half a point.

Roy was one of those closely involved. He noticed the odd circumstances but he didn't allow them to worry him which was sensible, courageous and very considerate of the other competitor.

Nevertheless, it is rather discouraging for the contestant who has obviously undertaken the more demanding program. It tends to fortify the arguments of those wise bypass the festival altogether because there is no much concentration required on one or two set numbers. Perhaps with some justification they feel that no much time can be expended in rehearing a required festival from to the exclusion of progress on a broader front.

Nevertheless, awards given for the highest average marks over a number of competitions should have everyone performing in the same number of classes and therefore competing on an even bases. These contestants would not necessarily all pop up in the same classes but certainly in the same number. This is equitable,

None of the foregoing blames any lower or any winner. None complained. Just me.

But the fact remains that anomalies such as those described do occur. They have crept into the festival like beetles in the woodwork. Perhaps, at the general meeting in June, someone may find a bottle of Flit.

Let's hope so, because it would be a pity if festival entrants were discouraged onsie entrants especially, seeing that they are in short supply.

THREE DISCOVERIES

Just recently I have acquired—and by perfectly legal mean — three quite distinctive new books.

If, as seems reasonable, it is part of our earthly responsibility to try to heighten life's burden for others by introducing the odd pleasantry here and there, I would surely be derelict if I did not hasten to me anyway — these books go in offering haven from the daily storm and all that sort of thing.

They are, as a matter of fact, each quite different from the other and two are different from what their titles would seem to suggest.

LONDON PUES, by one. A broad suggestion contained in the last two purports to be a "Pub laer's Note." Thus: "All we asked for was a simple, uncomplicated historical note to add in tistical information on the pub itself. What we get, as you will discover, is quite another matter."

For tourists and travellers with a thirst—either intellectual or physical—the statistical information on the 186 London pubs dealt with its most useful. It was selected, the leacock, I believe, who remarked that and shut like daisies in the sun." Mr. Reevel-Jones's information on he use of business prove the truth of this section beyond g shadow of a doubt. But it's all perfectly true and the individual openings and suttings are clearly set out.

Landon Pubs is among the most delightful, spirited (!) and yet informative books published in many a long day. It has as many surprises and delights as a dog has hairs!

Quite different is PRAYERS FROM THE translated from the French of Carms de Gasztold by Rumer Goddon,

The Pubs outnumber the Prayers by over six to one, there being 27 of the latter including that of Noah. One may read in the Foreword and the Epilogue all about Mile de Gazztold's life and one is left with the conclusion that, outside of her peculiar genius as exemplified in the Prayers, she is one among all of us. But that genius is alone quite sufficient to put her in a niche almost exclusively her own, though, without doubt, such as Ralph Hodgson, Gilbert Keith Chesterton, Walter de la Mare, and others Keith Chesterton, Walter de la Mare, and others

o have visited it once or twice.

The charm in the Prayers — which are all the charm in the Frayers—which are sit uttered by animals—comes from the fact that "every animal keeps its own character" and they penetrate our sensibilities—if not sometimes our consciences also—by their truthfulness. Their power resides in their simplicity and the appreciation of them grows all the treater because they are so agreeable.

greater because they are so agreeable.

Thus the Mouse says: "I nibble meagrely at life"; the Cat: "I ask nothing of anyone"; the life"; the Cat: "I ask nothing of anyone"; the Cock: "Do not forget, Lord, it is I who make the run rise." "No one but You and I understands what faithfulness is!" says another and it is surely quite unnecessary to identify this one? And guess who, among all the animals in creaton, opens his Prayer with "A little patience;

O God,

I am coming."

Who else but the slow, plodding tortoise?

The BOOK OF EECORDS has all the answers; for instance, to the above questions: the Marshall Islands goby (14,175 gobies to the ounce); the Nile (4,145 miles); Chateau Lafite-Rothschild, 1806 (around $115 a bottle); Wilson's petrels; the Turin Papyres (around 1320 B.C.): 1232 A.D. B.C.): 1232 A.D.

Of course all the sporting records are here, indoor and outdoor, and thousands of others besides. Over and above the mere statistical information, the book also provides some revelations and surprises in that many records apparently do not belong in countries where they are popularly supposed to.

The Record Book cannot be recommended as light reading but it is mighty interesting and an invaluable source for reference.

They also had an amusing little experience in London. Mrs. Wormald has a watch which, although she knows it is not expensive, she values as a keepsake from a friend. She lost the stem-winder somewhere in Piccadilly, so they turned in to the first jeweller's they found. The Colonist reported: "One of the pleasantest social events of the season was the return ball given to the Married Ladie! "Club by the numerous bachelors who had been their guests during the winter season.

As I dig into history I am con-stantly amazed how little really changes. The attuations which keep us agog today all happened years ago.

Cigarette amoking is much to the fore today. We think it a recent development. Not at all, Just read this editorial from The Columba in May of 1888:

"Cigarette amoking — The New York State Legislature is grappling with the question of cigarette smoking by boys, It is proposed to prohibit their sale to youths under 16 years of age, heavy penalties being attached.

"Accompanying some of these packages of cigarettes are lewd pictures which are calculated to make sad inroads upon the modesty of our youth.

"It is time a halt was called by our government; it is time some safeguard was placed around the innocents; it is time the govern-ment stepped in and dealt with this abuse as it does with the liquor traffic.

Youth was given a stern warning: "Boys know little of the great wrong they are doing to themselves in smoking eigarettes; they are quite unaware that they are ping their physical manhood that the seductive weed is the fore-runner of all vices."

Well. Victorians of 1888 were spared the unholy sight of school-girls smoking, as so often happens today. There's nothing so hideous to behold as a pretty girl smoking a cigarette. Indeed, it's a terrifying "On Wednesday was celebrated the marriage of Mr. C. W. Rogers, fruit dealer, Government Street, to Miss Leah Rogers, James Bay. The wedding took place at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. P. McF. McLeod, after which the party adjourned to the residence of the bride's mother, where a pleasant evening was passed. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome wedding pres-ents and many congratulations from friends . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers had long lives and much prosperity but very little happiness. Rogers started manufacturing chocolates from a recipe he kept secret. He achieved much fame, and Rogers' chocolates were, and still are, as much a part of Victoria as the Empress Hotel.

They had one son, and on his They had one son, and on his death his parents went into secusion. They lived in a modest house in James Bay. When the snow was deep on the ground they slept beside the stove in the back of their candy shop. They had money to travel, but never did. When they needed rests they went to St. Joseph's Hospital, loaded with chocolates for the nurses.

The Queen's birthday of 1888 was marked by the usual parades and regattas, fireworks and sports events. Baseball was taking a hold here, and there were those who said it was disgraceful that that Yankee game should be taking the place of cricket.

The Colonist editorially said: "Again comes round the ever-wel-come natal day of our Glorious Queen . . . Victoria the Good, the best beloved monarch upon the face of the globe, the noblest type of womanhood the Nineteenth Century has ever known, the true wife, the devoted mother, the faithful Christian, is 69 years of age, Hale and hearty and robust, the results of a well-governed life, she seems destined to many years of usefulness.

The regatta at the Gorge was the big event of the day: "Victoria Arm is an attractive place at any time . . . Picnic parties commenced to arrive at 10 a.m. and locate themselves in the numerous delightful places which abound on both sides of the water.

"A regular flotilia of boats, canoes, dugouts, and almost every-thing that would float a passenger, d up to where the regatta was By the roads, carriages drove st and furious, for it was the hackman's harvest day. The scene was an animated one, and all the strangers who were present were charmed beyond measure with the surroundings."
